Re:Marvin

AI is vaporware. Hawking opinion on it is worthless... as is Musk's (I love how Musk was nominated for The Luddite Award for his tirade on "the AI apocalypse").

Computers really haven't changed that much in 20 years. They still do the same crap they did 20 years ago, only faster. Humans literally have no idea how to create artificial sentience, and frankly that's a good thing. We are an irrational and destructive species that have nothing of value to add to the universe. Lets be honest about it. .... Anonymous Coward

Hi, AC,

AI possesses and projects remarkable stealth if one be successfully led to believe what you shared there.

Re: It's inevitable, Corporations will replace Governments

Corporations will eventually become so large that their gross revenue exceeds that of all major countries combined. It's close enough right now and bound to get worse.

At that point, Corporations will become the Government. They already make their own rules and one of the most dangerous is the "I'll take my ball and go home, if..." because it COULD bankrupt an entire continent.

Sooner or later this will happen. You won't have much say in the matter if they start lending money to your country. .... Anonymous Coward

Government will enjoy that, AC, as public and private ire zeroes in on the new? source of all of their problems. Eventually the truth will always out and corporate heads will be head hunted.

It is perfectly logical and unavoidable in such an instance.

Another movie star, Kevin Spacey, was also there, trying to find someone rich enough to bail out Relativity Studios ..... His pitch was all Hollywood but aimed at Northern California: “In the next few years Silicon Valley is going to much more involved in content. I would not be surprised if a big tech company would buy a studio,” he told reporters.

Or, if dodgy houses of marked cards and ye olde established operating system networks are to sort of survive, albeit with their leaderships fundamental changed, a moving bigger picture production studio would be much smarter buying into a Future Machined Virtual Reality Mining Operation, where everything is known beforehand and transparently freely shared to product place Superb Beta Future Derivative Content into Existence and Novel Life Phorms. They do exist out there. Of that you can be sure and assured and reassured.

And that aint no Fourth Industrial Revolution when it's Simply Made Complex IT and a Quantum MetaDataBase Evolution.

Fourth Industrial Revolution? Only in twisted dreams methinks.

In the Worlds of Live Operational Virtual Environments, ..... IT WareFare is All about Astute Fabless Future Applied Intelligence Resourced Systems. Such are certainly the Present's Contemporary Competition and Almighty Opposition

Another movie star, Kevin Spacey, was also there, trying to find someone rich enough to bail out Relativity Studios ..... His pitch was all Hollywood but aimed at Northern California: “In the next few years Silicon Valley is going to much more involved in content. I would not be surprised if a big tech company would buy a studio,” he told reporters. ....

Or, if dodgy houses of marked cards and ye olde established operating system networks are to sort of survive, albeit with their leaderships fundamental changed, a moving bigger picture production studio would be much smarter buying into a Future Machined Virtual Reality Mining Operation, where everything is known beforehand and transparently freely shared to product place Superb Beta Future Derivative Content into Existence and Novel Life Phorms. They do exist out there. Of that you can be sure and assured and reassured.

And that aint no Fourth Industrial Revolution when it's Simply Made Complex IT and a Quantum MetaDataBase Evolution.

And there are myriad enough easy stories for the likes of a Relativity Studio to ..... well, Self-Actuate and Driver/Energise. If you've got the time, Kevin, space cadets of the here and there everywhere now have the know how.

After all, if you don't believe it to be so with Simply Made Complex IT, call it out and Challenge IT to Magically Deliver. IT aint rocket science, is it, and you're bound to discover some real crazy secrets which will blow you right away.

PS One does wonder about the lack of Creative Direction in the BBC. Are they as Cuckold to Corrupting Forces and Perverted Sources?
